profile

Jamieson's legal practice is focused primarily on construction and real estate matters. He has significant experience assisting clients with product liability, competition law, class actions, insurance law, and commercial litigation. Jamieson is a partner with McMillan's Advocacy and Litigation Group.

Jamieson acts on all manner of construction disputes including CPM schedule and delay claims, complex negligence claims, lien claims, holdback and breach of trust issues. He regularly works on significant multi-party construction disputes in the P3 and EPC contracting space.

Jamieson represents a range of clients on commercial real estate matters including developers, property owners, and commercial landlords and tenants. He is focused on providing upfront and in depth risk management advice.

Jamieson has assisted clients with a variety of competition law issues including matters involving the Competition Bureau. His class action practice is focused on two main areas: competition, and product liability. He works on a cross-Canada team of experienced counsel advising a range of international businesses including pharmaceutical companies, automotive manufacturers, and financial services companies.

Jamieson regularly assists large-scale manufacturers with crafting practical business-focused solutions to a host of product liability issues. He has broad commercial litigation experience which includes experience with contract disputes, shareholder and partnership disputes, oppression claims, debt claims, allegations of fraud, and associated matters.
